“Break the walls
of the prison, that you have built!”

“Wake up from the dream, before you wake up in a nightmare!”

Those are not just quotes
from Deniz or some lines from the film-they're part of the call I'm putting out to everyone, who dares to question the status quo!

First of all: Understanding is very important, so this is a translation of the Quran 39:42

IT IS ALLAH THAT TAKES THE SOULS AT DEATH.
AND THOSE THAT DIE NOT (HE TAKES THEIR SOULS)
DURING THEIR SLEEP.

THOSE ON WHOM HE HAS PASSED THE DECREE OF DEATH HE KEEPS BACK (THEIR SOULS FROM RETURNING TO THEIR BODIES);

BUT THE REST HE SENDS (THEIR SOULS BACK TO THEIR BODIES) FOR A TERM APPOINTED.

VERILY IN THIS ARE SIGNS FOR THOSE WHO REFLECT.
QURAN 39:42

So beside all the scientific aspects throw out the Quran, which will also be a part in the movie, but primarily the spiritual aspects will be the foundation of this movie. So let's reflect:

First Scene:

Dream with brother (introduction)

Our mind travels in dreams, I understood that at a young age. Do you know that feeling when you wake up screaming from a nightmare? My brother and I slept in the bunk bed, I slept above. I dreamed that I was driving in a cabriolet and the passenger was my younger brother. A hilarious mood, but I lost control and crashed into a wall.

Waking up screaming from a nightmare!

That happened that day and I was wandering in the bunk bed, did I hear that right? Had my brother lying beneath me actually screaming too? I quietly looked down and he looked up at that moment. We startled again because we unexpectedly looked at each other and I wanted to know from him what had happened.

He named the event I had just dreamed of, that I was driving and that he was sitting next to me as a passenger. I have lost control and hit the wall. I was surprised.

Another thought followed, fortunately I asked what had happened and he then named the dream event to me. Thus, I had confirmation that his soul had indeed dreamed this with me (my soul).

What I didn't know was that the spirit/soul actually traveled to another planet and that actually happened.

But did that really happen or not? With these memories I try to find other suitable galaxies next scene: Black screen (first only voice):

There is a question that is as old as mankind itself. Perhaps for some people this question is the most important question of all. Before our world broke up, there were even people who didn't want to know anything about this question. The question is: where do we come from? Or to put it another way, where does the whole universe we live in come from? Or has it existed forever?

There was a time when it was simply assumed that this universe existed forever and that was more or less a way of avoiding the question. Because if it's always been there, then you tick that off, and then you don't need to ask the question anymore.

Until then at the beginning of the twenty-first century, they found out that this world does not exist forever, namely one physicist has observed that this universe is expanding.

Graphically impressive scenes until the last part and that's where the speaker is shown in the next scene.
